

DR ANNA REMINGTON
Associate Professor and Director

DR ANNA REMINGTON is Associate Professor and Director of the UCL Centre for Research in Autism and Education (CRAE).

Her work focuses on superior abilities in autism, specifically with respect to attention and perception within the condition, and how these might translate into practical benefits such as employment success.

Her findings have been published in the leading journals within the field, and she is regularly invited to present her research both nationally and internationally.

In addition, Anna advises organisations regarding best practice for supporting autistic employees.
